

HOME REVIEW

VOLUME 12 ISSUE 12 DECEMBER 2016 100 PAGES 142

BY VEDHANT K. PETERSON

THE SUNSHINE VILL
BY ANKIT PRABHUDESSA

DCOOP ARCHITECTS
PARADIGM SHIFT

ROOF(S) OVERHEAD

KHOSLA ASSOCIATES' BALANCE OF FORM AND FUNCTION

DESIGNQUEST

Making Everyday Objects Beautiful

By Preeti Vaidyanath & Anoopkumar Vaidyanath

Life is full of precious moments and the beauty of it lies in capturing them. Though for most people, these instances of joy come in the form of photographs, but for people like us, they come in the form of designer products. Quite literally, we create objects that foster our unique experiences.

Inspired by the personal moments of our life which come through a paper boat that is sailing in the rain or a kid who is playing with a paper plane dreaming of flying a real one soon, we are always keen to contextualise our experiences into simple, functional, emotional, evocative designs.

Our inspiration stems from different places at different times. We find ourselves inspired by experiences, materials and curiosity; sometimes it is about looking at things differently, and at times it is about solving a problem where the result might require a functional solution.

For the most part, our environment is our biggest source of inspiration. Using inspiration from material, processes, experiences, context and people, we create objects and experiences which lean towards minimal aesthetics, are emotionally evoking and use precisely engineered construction.

Our source of creativity lies in anything and everything around us which lets us spread oodles of joy, smile and magic in the lives of our customers. We use the best of materials, technology and resources to fashion remarkably crafted objects. This is what places our work at the intersection of art and design.

At Rayden Design Studio, you'll come across art, design and technology blended to create unique products that don't serve the mere piece of being just any other decor material. We strive to enumerate a story behind our myriad range of products designed in various materials including copper, wood, stone/terrazzo and others.

Urban Terrace Oil Lamp

Urban Terrace Glass and Copper

Urban Terrace Oil Lamp, Glass and Copper